Project Description

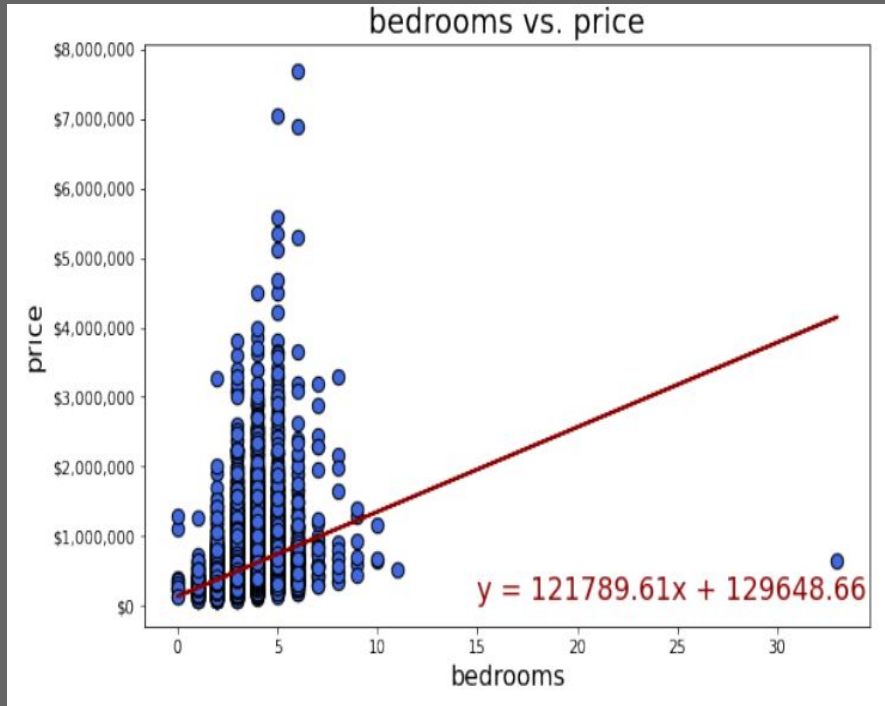

The House Sales in King County, USA dataset contains house sale prices for King County, which includes Seattle from May 2014 to May 2015.

Research Question: Do house features have an effect on the price of house sales?

Hypothesis: House features do have an effect on the price of house sales.

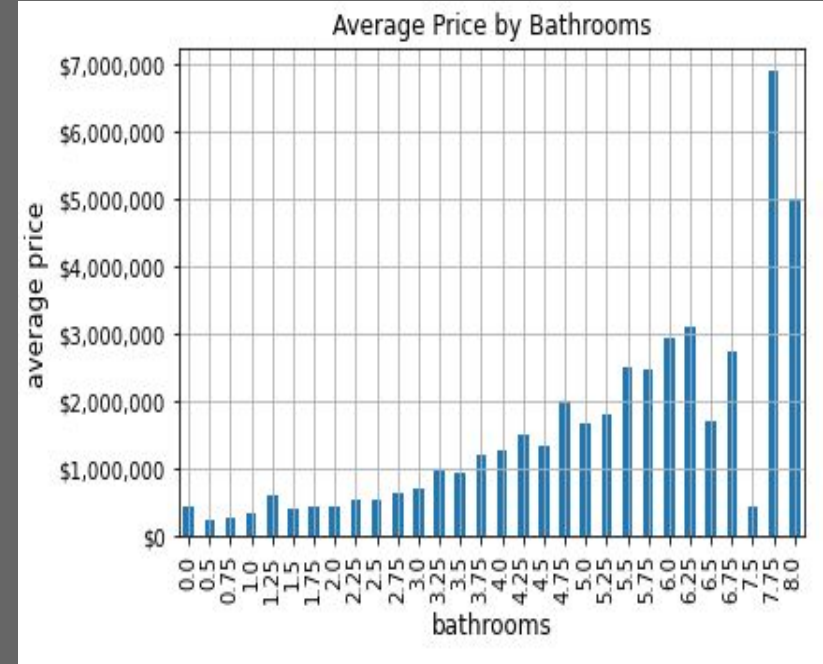

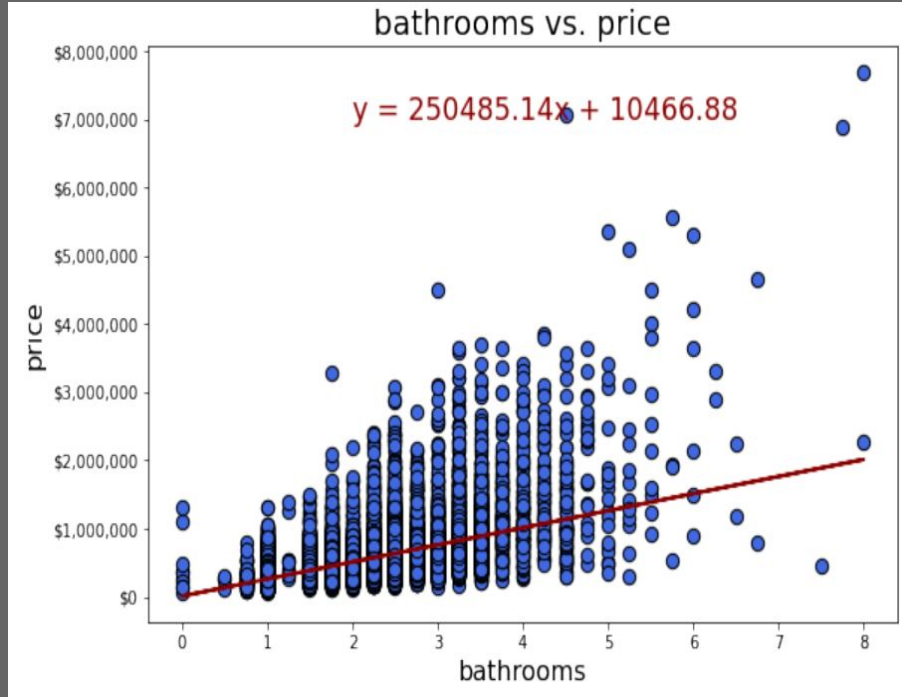

Is the price higher when there are more bedrooms?

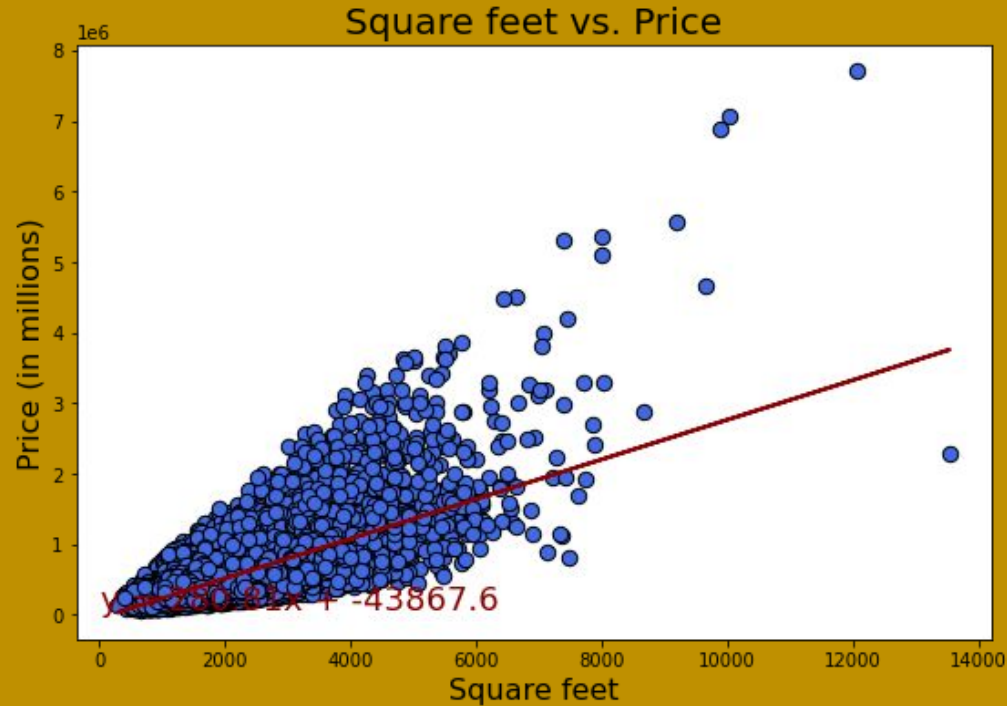

The r-squared is: 0.3083383686880964

Is the price higher when there are more bathrooms?

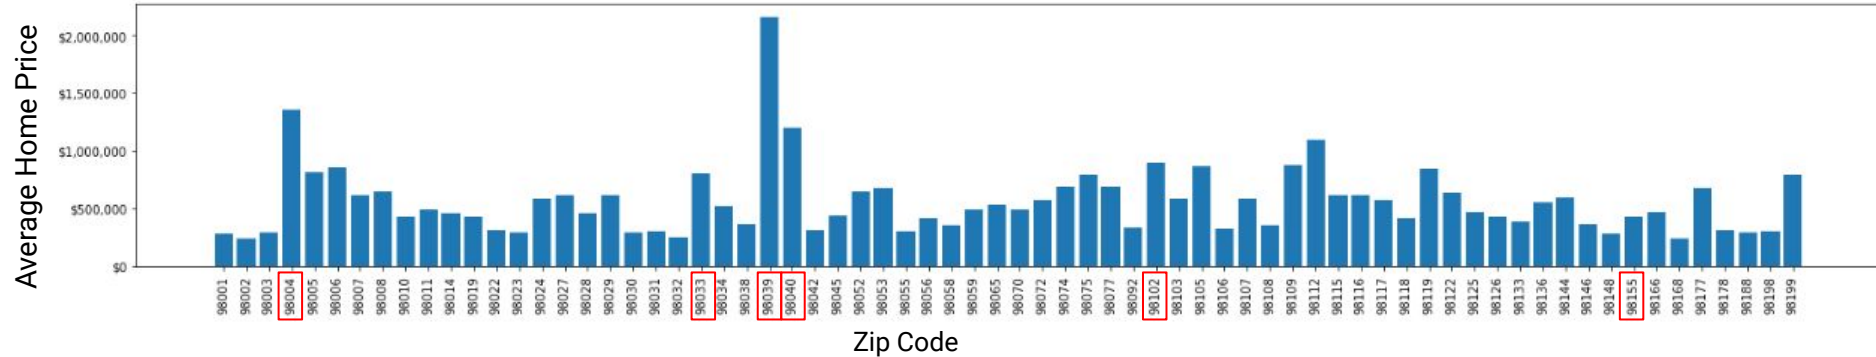

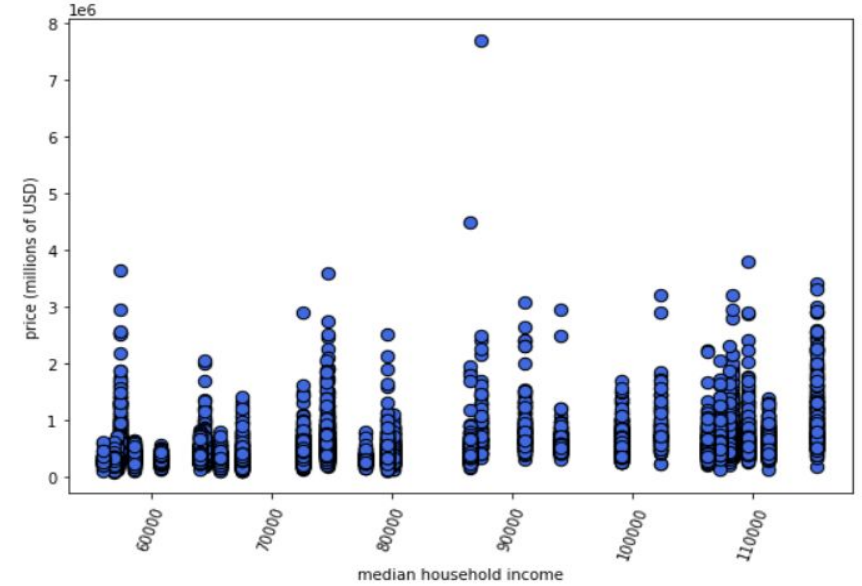

The r-squared is: 0.5251340727456009

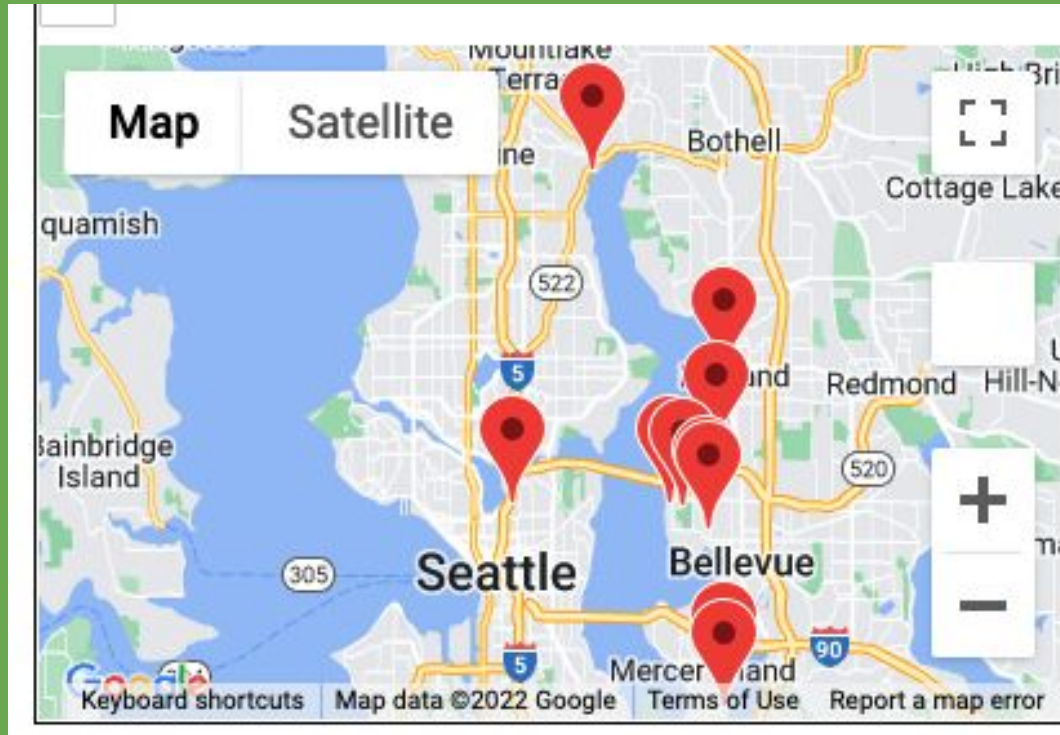

What's the correlation between square feet and pricing?

Are house sale prices higher in higher income neighborhoods?

Waterfront View

Do houses with a waterfront view or without a waterfront view have more price outliers?

Within the same living square footage range, price is higher for houses having waterfront view than non-waterfront view

Boxplot (waterfront/non-waterfront & price)

The boxplot shows:

Median, upper quartile,

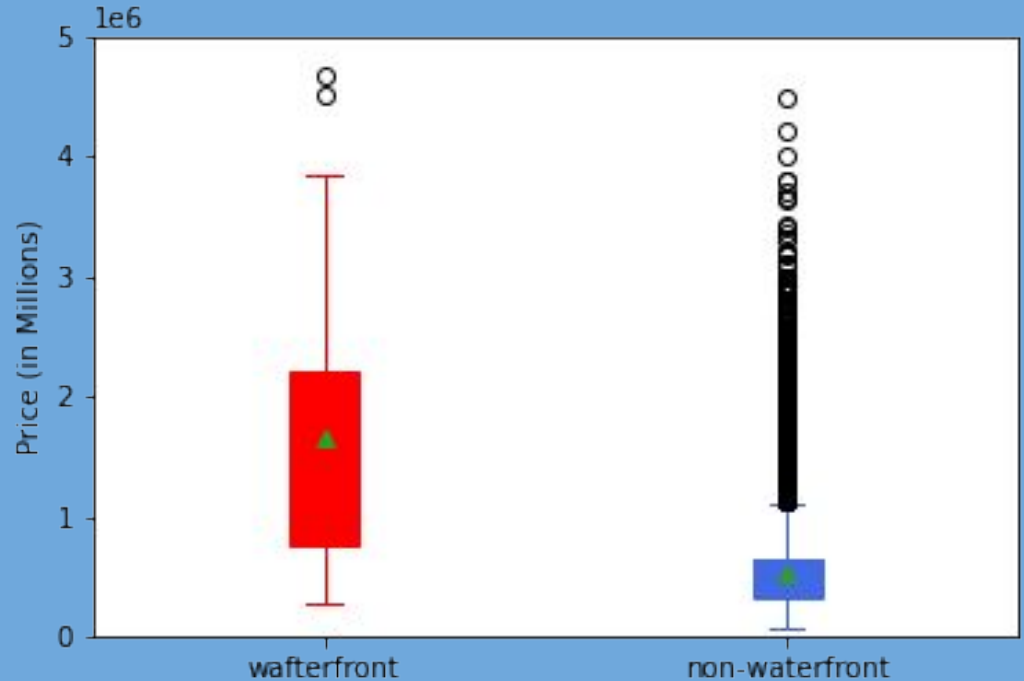

lower quartile,

upper extreme and

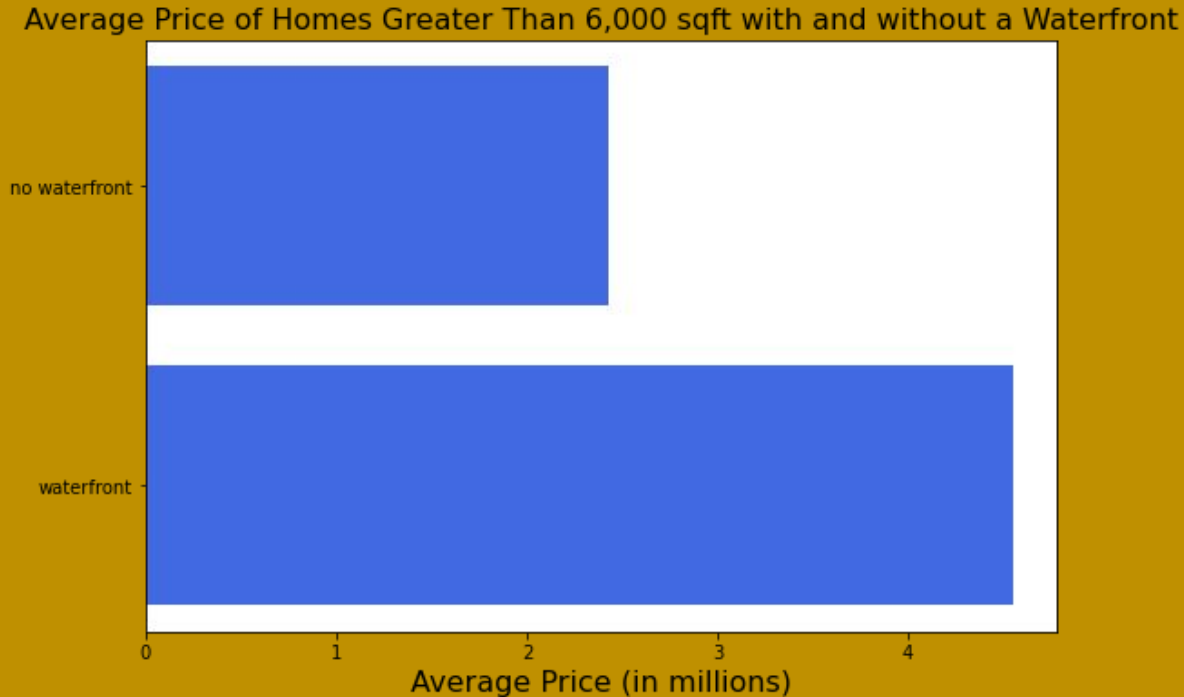

lower extreme for both

Waterfront &

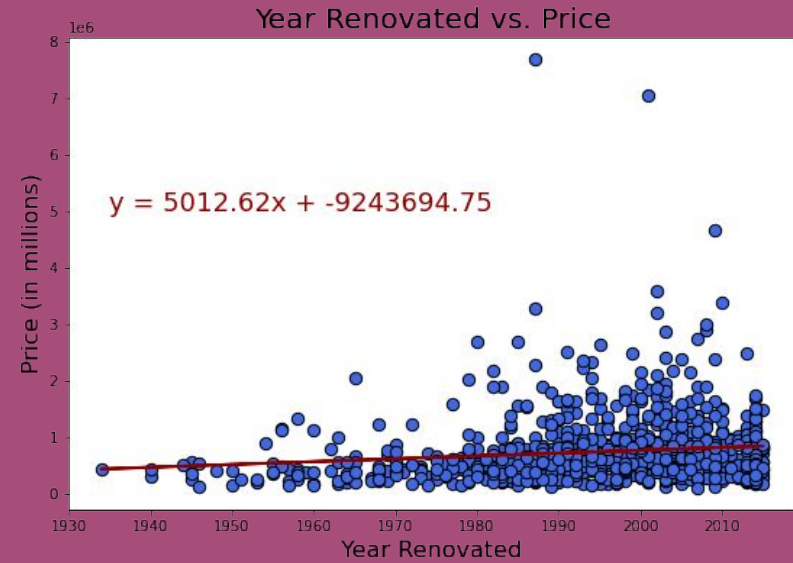

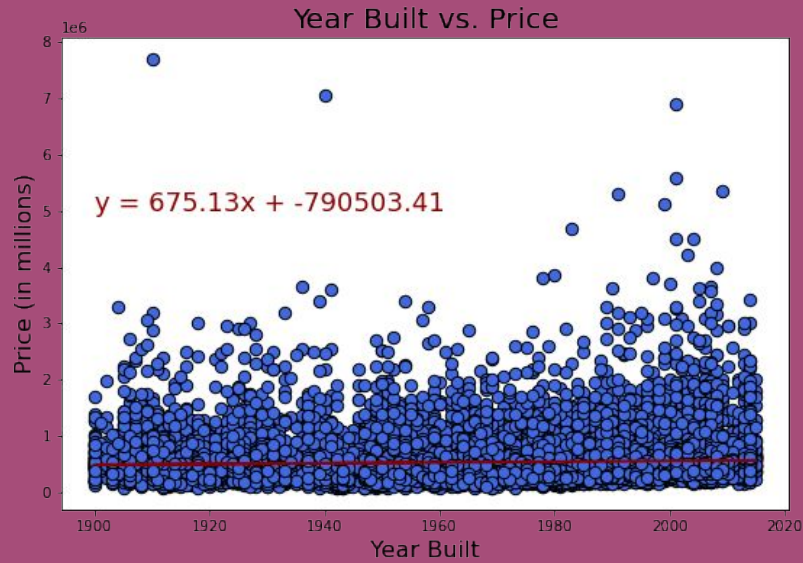

non-waterfront

Do homes larger than 6,000 sqft with a waterfront view cost more or less than those without a waterfront view?

Do newly built homes cost more than older built homes and where/ which zipcodes are the majority of the newly built homes located at?

Map of 6 homes built in 2015

Neighborhoods with newest houses:

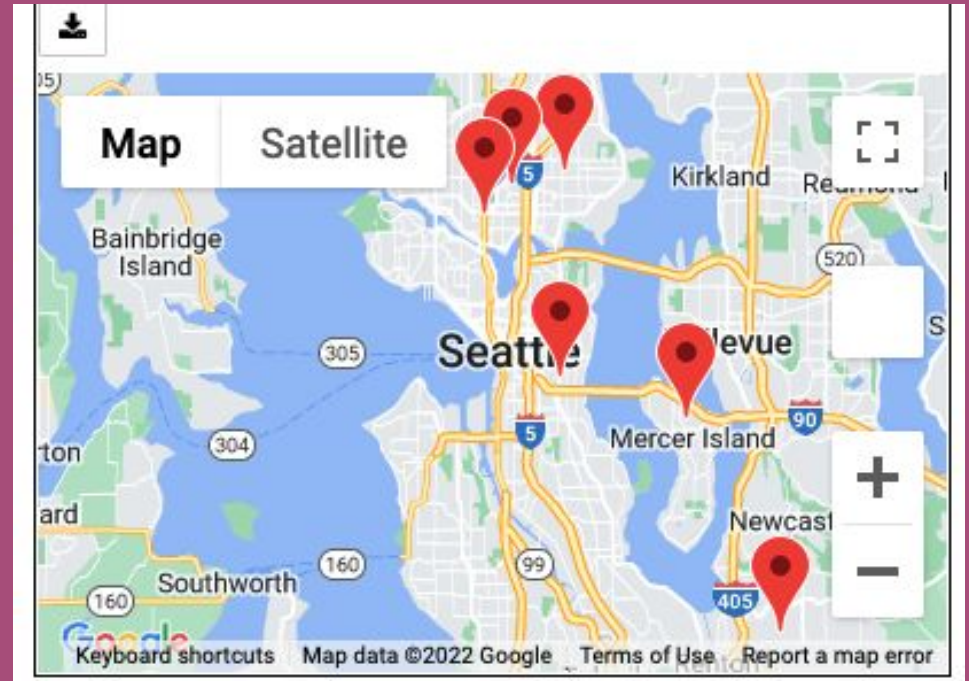

98103 Greenlake

98115 Ravenna/Maple Leaf

98144 Atlantic/Mt. Baker

98040 Mercer Island

98056 Renton

Conclusion

- Certain house features have a greater effect on price than others
- House prices depend on multiple house features, not only just one
- Limitation:
 - dataset is only within a 1 year time frame, not most current/ up- to date data
- Lack of inclusivity for folks with disabilities - only column in this data set that may indicate some level of accessible housing is number of floors (how many homes are ranch/one level)
- Outlier: Home with 33 bedrooms
